Vigdis Allister. Born in 1951.

I started to paint by coincidence, since that, painting became a big part of my life. I get inspiration from life it self, from music and from the Scandinavian light. Sometimes a picture gets formed in my head, other times it comes when I sit down in front of the easel.

I paint from my heart and soul, and I call my paintings "Soul paintings"

I have attended exhibitions in Norway, Denmark and Spain

This picture is called "Entre chien et loup " 60 x 60 cm. (Between dog and wolf) I got the idea for the picture when I read a book. Entre chien et loup is an old French way to mention the elusive twilight ... when the light surrenders to the dark, and when innocence is transformed into danger .

The image got formed in my head, and I slowly began to work with the grounding. and it has cracks "a la fresco paintings".

Poetry by Tany Phoenix (made specially for this painting.)

"Have you ever heard of the legend Of an eternal love from above Between a Prince Charming and a siren Totally smitten with each other's love It is entre chien et loup

When the light slowly turns into darkness. That one could only dream of a glimpse of their spellbinding and mysterious virtue For whoever can see the invisible beat from their heart Will forever be blessed with tenderness and happiness"

"Between dog and wolf" Or "When the light turns into darkness" 60 x 60 cm.
